

Well Advised:

A Better Way to Make Healthcare Decisions

Health care is a high priority for tens of millions of older Americans. But finding the right plans, doctors, and hospitals is often difficult and feels exhausting. There are so many questions to answer and so little information to guide you:

- Will your prescriptions be covered at a price you can afford?
- How can you be sure you're not paying more on your medical bills than you have to?
- How do you know which medical plan is the right one for your situation?

The lack of unbiased guidance is one reason moving to Medicare or switching plans is among the most difficult decisions for people 65 and older. It's also why 94% of people are not enrolled in their optimal Medicare plan.

There is a way out of the maze of confusing options.

About Well Advised

Well Advised partners with physician practices, health systems, and other organizations to give their patients a free, unbiased, and confidential tool they can use to get the coverage and care they need. Healthcare providers benefit by lowering bad debt, increasing revenue, and improving patient satisfaction.

The Well Advised team includes leading scientists from artificial intelligence (AI), working with experts in health care, insurance, and health informatics from Kaiser, Epic Systems, HCA, and Blue Cross Blue Shield.

Since launching our technology platform and brokerage in 2019, we are commercially licensed and available in all 50 states. We have secured agreements with UCSF Health, Olive AI, DispatchHealth and the hospital associations of California, Arizona, and Colorado, giving us direct access to over seven million Medicare consumers.
